Effective Engagement with Residents

Inform, Consult, Involve, Collaborate, Empower

Primary focuses of management and service programs should revolve around helping people cope and adapt, solving problems, addressing all clients’ needs, and resolving conflicts. Extra time spent to assess the needs of individuals and supporting them through change is extremely important when it comes to receiving any engagement. People do not need assistance simply because of their background, and not all residents have the same need, which makes it especially vital to ensure you are engaging all your residences.

- Consider the diversity of your residents, not only on a general level but individual interaction is extremely important.
  - Be inclusive to a diverse range of people and how to address any barriers they may have to participating.
  - Keep traditional communications alive (face to face, mail, newspapers, printed material), while also implementing any new forms of communication (social media, email, etc.) for residents to use.
  - Engage in ways that are culturally appropriate and sensitive to the needs of people, no matter their background (cultural, religious, sexuality, etc.).

- Conferences, focus groups, and workshops: Residents are often more willing to come along and provide valuable input into what you are engaging on or informing them about.

- Try to consider including a support person, like a family member or friend or representative of an organization, especially to people who have cognitive impairment or where there is little English spoken.

- Do not assume that because people are older or may have a disability that they are not able to contribute or add value to certain decisions. In fact, take more time to discuss and carefully decide on any decisions made for your organization.

❖ LISTEN TO THEM.
SAGE ADVICE

S: Simplify. Not everything has to be in technical terms! Use words and terms that people are familiar with for people to understand.

A: Assure. Do not assume that people are dumb, deaf, or blind, especially if they are older or have a disability. Assure to them that their views are important through kindness and involvement in all forms.

G: Give information. Share information in ways that people prefer. For instance, writing or demonstrating information can be helpful.

E: Ease into it. Sharing too much, too quick can be extremely overwhelming. Allow people time to process information they can speak on.

A: Acknowledge. Recognize, engage, and listen.

D: Discovery: Just because someone acknowledges that you are speaking does not mean they understand. Ask questions to see if they comprehend.

V: Value: Respect your residents by using their proper name. Avoid using overly friendly slang when discussing an issue or topic.

I: Individualize: Acknowledge language barriers and be sensitive to different values, cultural beliefs and changes associated with natural aging.

C: Communicate: Avoid telling people what to do. Try and focus on what is most important for people to know and consider. But also make sure they recognize what is required of them.

E: Empathize: Try to understand a situation from the other perspective. Watch for feedback and cues to push communication and information sharing. But be sensitive to a personal situation.
Focus Groups: A group of people (smaller to medium-sized groups) explore and respond to an issue in a structured way that is facilitated.

- Advantages:
  - Useful for a detailed analysis of a particular issue.
  - Can involve training and the use of peer facilitators
  - Can trigger further discussion and group discussion.

- Disadvantages:
  - May not be statistically representative of all residents.
  - May not be a suitable forum for everyone to discuss personal issues.

- Suggestions:
  - Focus groups should be used as a part of a larger engagement process to analyze and comment on particular issues.
  - To increase representativeness, peak, community sector organizations and schools can run focus groups.

Forums: Coming together to explore and share ideas about a topic or an issue. Forums are facilitated and usually involve the development of solutions and decisions. A public meeting format is not recommended as a forum.

- Advantages:
  - Can involve a large representative sample of residents.
  - Allows people the opportunity to interact with others.
  - Can develop the communication skills of younger or even older residents.
  - Can be empowering for everyone if they are able to influence the forum’s agenda and contribute to the outcomes.

- Disadvantages:
  - May not be a suitable forum for everyone to discuss personal issues.
  - Need substantial planning and monitoring.
  - Not everyone feels comfortable speaking in front of large groups.

- Suggestions:
  - Ensure residents are adequately prepared to discuss the issues.
  - Creative presentations can be part of the forum and inspire discussions.
  - Break into smaller groups.

Interviews: Generates an actual face-to-face discussion regarding a specific topic or issue. Can be informal or formal but must be structured.

- Advantages:
  - Can provide participants with the opportunity to talk about issues that may be difficult in large groups.
  - Can be a comfortable and relaxed process that inspires a rapport with the interviewer and participant.
Disadvantages:
- Will not be representative of all older people.
- Can be intimidating to those that have little experience with being interviewed or with limited speaking/English skills.
- No group interaction or ability to talk or brainstorm ideas with other people.
- Unsuitable if a large sample is needed.
- Unsuitable if the participant or observer has limited time.
- Can be difficult to recruit interviewees (or even interviewers).

Suggestions:
- Provide some skill development for the participant particularly if they have never been interviewed before.

Surveys: Formal process in which people respond to a set list of questions. Surveys can be physical or electronic.

Advantages:
- Useful and quick method of gaining the views of a large cross section of residents.
- Can be physical (paper or through phone) or can be electronic via an email link or posted online.
- Allows for anonymity.
- Useful to include people that are geographically isolated.
- Can be completed at the convenience of the participant.

Disadvantages:
- Difficult to determine the seriousness of responses.
- Literacy abilities and clarity determines the quality and accuracy of responses.
- Residents, who are from non-English speaking backgrounds, may not find surveys accessible.
- No group interaction or ability to talk or brainstorm ideas with other people.

Suggestions
- Ensure that surveys are short and clear.
- Be clear about the purpose of the survey.
- Provide language support or translate the survey.
- Ensure adequate options and include opportunities for comments.
- Make sure that all residents have the opportunity to participate in the survey process.

Reference Group: A group of residents that regularly provide feedback and support to government and provide the views of older people directly into government policies and programs.
_advantages:
  o Enables those receiving feedback to have an easy and ongoing access to a group of older people.
  o Can be a starting point for other engagement processes for government.
  o Enables older people to have direct feedback and input to those in higher positions of power on a regular basis.
  o Can provide a forum in which people can develop skills, experience, and confidence to feel included in their properties.

_disadvantages:
  o May exclude residents/may not be representative of everyone living on the property.
  o Can limit participation from marginalized and diverse groups or those who may not have been involved previously.
  o Requires resources to support the group.
  o Formal meeting require a regular, ongoing commitment by older people to the committee (this may be difficult for participants with other commitments).

_suggestions:
  o Allow these individuals to establish the group in their own terms of references and purpose.
  o Informal networks can also be effective.
